

DEMOCRATIC GOVERNANCE PROGRAM

Activity Title: Opening Politics By Acting Locally (OPAL)

Implementation Timeframe: May 2002 – March 2007

Objective: To engage civil society organizations (CSOs) and local political parties in activities that will increase political participation and promote the reform of political processes, and to professionalize parliamentary practices through strengthening parliamentary representation, accountability and linkages to the public.

Description: America's two major political party institutes, the International Republican Institute (IRI) and the National Democratic Institute for International Affairs (NDI), implement similar programs in different parts of Romania while collaborating on political reform efforts at the central level which will encourage greater local input. Through the OPAL program, IRI and NDI work with CSOs and local branches of the major, democratic political parties to help them engage in activities that increase citizen participation in community life. OPAL promotes participatory decision-making and more issue-based, demand driven political processes. Through training and consultations provided to local political party branches, IRI and NDI help party branches expand community outreach and reduce dependence on central party structures in order to become more internally democratic and responsive to community needs. Through training provided to CSOs, the institutes encourage greater political involvement and interest articulation. Through all its activities, OPAL will also help citizen use more effectively the new freedom of information law. IRI and NDI also provide support to the Romanian Parliament by helping to improve constituency services, monitoring the performance of Parliamentarians, working with committee members on public hearings and increasing public participation in legislative processes and providing direct training to a wide range of members on issues related to representation.

Activity Title: Rule of Law Program

Implementation Timeframe: June 2005 – April 2007

Objective: To build sustainable partnerships that contribute to sustained democratic and transparent legal systems and institutions promoting the rule of law.

Description: The purpose of the program is two-fold: 1) increase the independence and integrity of the Romanian judiciary; and 2) increase the attention of the Romanian judiciary to domestic violence issues. Through the Rule of Law program, ABA/CEELI works with the Superior Council of Magistrates, the Ministry of Justice, and Romanian nongovernmental organizations to: establish mechanisms for the implementation of judicial reform legislation; reform judicial performance and evaluation standards; increase the transparency and objectivity of the judicial evaluation process; improve the legislation addressing domestic violence and victims assistance; identify legal as well as practical issues judges must take into consideration when dealing with domestic violence cases; and create and test a pilot training module for judges specialized in criminal cases and family/juvenile panels.

Activity Title: Romania Civil Society Strengthening Program

Implementation Timeframe: October 2005 – March 2008

Objective: To strengthen Romanian organizations that monitor the impact of and compliance with public policy as well as perform advocacy and public policy development functions..

Description: The program targets NGOs and public policy organizations that monitor the accountability and transparency of government as well as intermediary support organizations (ISOs) that provide services, support, and leadership to the NGO sector. The organizations will learn to consolidate their managerial and financial capacities, increase responsibility of boards, update and follow strategic plans, document and report impact, tighten ties with their constituencies, and use more effective public relations instruments. Activities in this area will contribute to more stable, responsive, and sustainable civil society organizations through effective partnerships with local public authorities, businesses, local, regional, international, or academic organizations.
